Crossing borders through film

Kashyap Baldev Shangari talks about his Hollywood debut in Inheritance and the emotional depth behind the thrilling story

A still from Inheritance

Aman Jain

Actor-filmmaker Kashyap Baldev Shangari, known for his layered performances in Made in Heaven, The Fame Game and Shehar Lakhot, has made his Hollywood debut in Neil Burger's 2025 espionage thriller Inheritance. Starting as a background dancer in Bollywood hits like Baadshah and Kaho Naa Pyaar Hai, Shangari's journey has been one of quiet determination and artistic depth. In an exclusive conversation with The Free Press Journal, he reflected on embracing psychological tension over spectacle and finding belonging across cultures. Also an acclaimed short film director (Bittoo Escobar, Mumtaz), Shangari brings emotional intimacy to a film that bridges continents — and careers. Excerpts:

Q. What was it like sharing screen space with stars like Phoebe Dynevor and Rhys Ifans? Any memorable moments on set?

A. Working with Phoebe was a gift. She brings this quiet power into a scene — she listens fully, reacts honestly, and that makes every moment feel alive. We had a few emotionally charged scenes together, and she held the space with such presence and generosity. I didn't work with Rhys in a direct capacity, but having watched the film and knowing his incredible body of work, it's a privilege to share credit on a project that also features him. He has this wild unpredictability as an actor — you feel like something dangerous and brilliant could happen at any second. Just to be in the same film as someone like him is a masterclass in itself.

Q. You were a background dancer in Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai. Memories from watching Hrithik dancing during the shoot? Was there any inkling that it would be such a massive hit?

A. Oh, I remember it vividly. Hrithik had this quiet intensity even then — focused, driven, but very grounded. When he danced, there was this sharpness and grace that felt different. You didn't need hindsight — you knew something big was happening. I was a kid, just trying to keep up in the back row, but there was an unspoken electricity in the air. Did I know it would be a phenomenon? Not quite. But I felt I was part of something that had spark — and that feeling stays with you.
