CHALLENGING TIME

When Hrithik opened up about his father's financial worries after failure of film

Veteran filmmaker Rakesh Roshan, known for his remarkable contributions to Hindi cinema, has had a career spanning over five decades. He directed several iconic films, including 'Khoon Bhari Maang,' 'Khudgarz,' and 'Karan Arjun,' and played a pivotal role in launching his son Hrithik Roshan with 'Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai.'

However, despite his many successes, he faced a particularly challenging phase following the release of his 1997 action-thriller 'Koyla.'

The film, which starred Shah Rukh Khan and Madhuri Dixit in lead roles, did not perform as expected at the box office, leading to severe financial losses for the filmmaker. Hrithik Roshan once shared that he saw his father in tears after suffering significant financial setbacks due to the film's performance. During an interview with Komal Nahta for ETC Bollywood, Hrithik recalled three instances when he witnessed his father becoming emotional. Among those moments, one of the earliest was during the difficult period following 'Koyla's' release.

Hrithik recounted how his father lost all his savings, some of which he had invested, while another portion had been given to someone who later defaulted on repayment. The financial turmoil deeply affected Rakesh Roshan, and Hrithik vividly remembered seeing him overwhelmed with emotions during that time.

Apart from this, Hrithik also recalled two other emotional moments involving his father. The first was in 2000 when 'Kaho Naa... Pyaar Hai' became a massive success, marking Hrithik's debut as a leading actor. The overwhelming response to the film moved Rakesh Roshan to tears. The second instance occurred in 2013 when Hrithik underwent brain surgery, a challenging period for the family that once again left the filmmaker emotional.

Despite the difficulties that came with 'Koyla,' Rakesh Roshan's career continued to flourish. —ETimes
