Why is Bollywood selling property now?

Celebrities are selling real estate to save tax and reinvest smartly

Lalatendu Mishra

For today's celebrities, many of whom have become High Networth Individuals (HNIs), real estate has become more than just a status symbol. It has become one of their strategic investment tools.

The economic liberalisation of the 1990s has opened up vast opportunities for Indian celebrities, ranging from films, brand endorsements, a growing number of multiplexes, rising international appeal, global tours, social media exposure to OTT platforms, adding tremendously to their income, according to analysts.

As their earnings soared over the past few decades, many of them entered the league of HNIs and Ultra High Net-Worth Individuals (UHNIs) with a growing interest in wealth-building through diversified income streams beyond just acting and investments in assets, including real estate, they added.

For example, celebrities such as Shah Rukh Khan entered the Hurun India Rich List 2024 and joined other names such as Juhi Chawla, Hrithik Roshan, Amitabh Bachchan (right) and Karan Johar.

Thus, the portfolios of the celebrities today include everything from luxury residences and holiday homes to commercial offices and land, driven by a mix of personal lifestyle choices as well as long-term financial planning. Today, they are seen actively buying, selling, renting or leasing out these properties.

Prime reason

Recent trends show that many celebrities are selling their luxury apartments in Mumbai and elsewhere, making people curious about their moves. What are the key reasons for selling?

While there is no single reason behind these decisions, tax implications and planning seems to be the prime reason behind investment in real estate. In the Union Budget 2024, the government introduced a flat 12.5% tax on long-term capital gains (LTCG) from property sales, but without the benefit of indexation. This means there's no inflation adjustment on the purchase price, so properties bought years ago could now attract significantly higher taxable gains.

In a major relief, the government had allowed a grandfathering rule for assets bought before 23 July, 2024. These can still be taxed at either 20% with indexation or 12.5% without, whichever one chooses.

"To lock in these benefits and for certainty, many HNIs and UHNs are choosing to sell properties. Additionally, reinvesting the gains into another residential property can offer tax exemptions with a cap of up to ₹10 crore. Anything over and above will be taxed as per LTCG," says Renuka Kulkarni, Head of Research, Square Yards. (Gains from properties sold within two years are taxed as short-term capital gains at the individual's income tax slab rate.)

Capitalising on market gains is another reason behind the sale of properties. Since the pandemic triggered a strong revival in the residential real estate market, especially in the luxury segment, due to lifestyle changes, low interest rates, and increased disposable income, property prices as per Square Yards data increased sharply by up to 60% in Mumbai MMR, Delhi NCR, Pune, Hyderabad, and Bengaluru. High-net-worth individuals, including celebrities, actively participated in this upcycle.

Insights from Square Yards, which collects and aggregates diverse real estate data, reveal that 63% of real estate transactions done by celebrities post-2020 were residential, 32% commercial, and the rest across other asset classes.

"However, post this boom in residential segment, the market is now normalising, and the price growth moderating from its post-pandemic highs. Celebrities – like many HNIs – are re-evaluating their holdings and are choosing to sell to cash in on the strong returns on these high-value properties, purchased at much lower rates in preceding years," Kulkarni says.

High-yielding investments

Another factor is to have increased liquidity to explore high-yielding investments and for the purpose of relocation. "Portfolio rebalancing and upgrading is the norm. Proceeds from sales are often deployed into newer, better-located properties, commercial real estate, or even global assets. Some celebrities are also selling older real estate holdings to upgrade lifestyle, buy bigger or better-located homes, or shift investment focus," Kulkarni shares.

With recent geopolitical uncertainties and bearish trends in the stock market, many individuals are selling real estate to book profits and offset their capital losses in equities. "By setting off gains from real estate against losses in their stock market portfolios, they can reduce their overall tax liability. This strategy supports effective tax planning by balancing gains and losses across asset classes, and carries forward unused losses to reduce tax liabilities in the next years," Kulkarni adds.

According to analysts, many celebrities, such as Amitabh Bachchan, are now investing in land in Alibaug and elsewhere. Abhinandan Lodha, Chairman, The House of Abhinandan Lodha, says, "For many celebrities, investing in land is a rewarding way to diversify their wealth beyond their main profession. Land in India, for centuries, has always been stable asset with very little volatility compared to the other asset classes. It also offers the flexibility of personal use – such as building a private retreat or holiday home – while holding emotional value as a legacy, allowing them to leave something meaningful for generations to follow."

In recent years, the rise of branded, gated community-style land developments has added credibility and structure to what was once considered a complex and opaque process of investing in land. Lodha states that due to the strong emphasis on quality, security of the property, convenience, and transparency at his company, many celebrities, including top Bollywood stars, musicians, and people in sports, are finding value.

"People all around the world are now buying land through a completely hassle-free virtual experience [i.e. purchasing land without any physical interaction], which is a first in India and probably even globally," he says. "Due to all these factors, celebrities are viewing land not just as a wealth creator but as a lifestyle choice – one that aligns with their personal aspirations while strengthening their investment portfolio. It's a tangible, long-term play with both emotional and economic returns," he concludes.

Protein
maxxing

Just like taking the “middle way” in life is the path to nirvana, figuring out a Goldilocks zone for your body’s protein needs seems to be the key to a healthy, happy life

Tamma Moksha
tamma.moksha@thehindu.co.in Aspectre is haunting rich fitness enthusiasts in urban India – the spectre of protein maxxng. A stroll in the aisles of your neighbourhood supermarket or a scroll on your go-to quick commerce app will bring up a range of products with claims of high protein content, products I’d argue you can do well without.

While I understand opting for whey protein powder or high-protein breakfast bars, why must one even consider looking for protein in popcorn? I do not want to worry about my protein intake while I am munching on popcorn to Hans Zimmer’s score in the theatre. This mania does not stop with bars, shakes, and popcorn, though. Today, you have the option to access products like cold coffee, wafers, pasta, ice cream, chips, lassi, buttermilk, and water that boast of unbelievable (and sometimes unreliable) grams of protein. Imagine introducing the concept of protein pasta to a nonna in Sicily... I would pay to watch you try.

What began as a nutritional necessity has slowly turned into a performance. It is impossible to strike up a conversation with fitness bros without exchanging notes on protein intake, muscle recovery, BCAAs, whey isolates, and the betrayal that is “hidden sugar”. Whipping up protein desserts you watched on an Instagram reel, only to complain about the taste, but persist with a poker face, is definitely a choice. See, I am not against protein at all; in fact, I enjoy a good protein shake myself. But the struggle to hit your protein goals should not have you bookmarking threads on Reddit that give a cheat sheet to snag Amul’s protein lassis, which are always out of stock for some reason. In your quest for macros, you should not have to do a course in supply chain management.

A push for a balanced diet has now slowly turned into a lifestyle project.

The WHO recommends that adults with minimal physical activity consume about 0.83 grams of protein per kilogram of body weight per day. For individuals with moderate to intense physical activity, the protein needs to increase to 1.3-1.6 grams per kilogram of body weight. A scale that should just serve as a footnote in your daily life is being used to measure your life, an exercise that might tire you out before you even get to the barbells.

I admit that life would be so much easier if protein water got all of us jacked like Hrithik Roshan. But the bitter truth is that consuming copious amounts of protein without lifting weights is only going to strain our kidneys and have serious implications for our cardiovascular health. Hey, this is what the doctors have to say. Do not shoot the messenger!

Let me channel my inner Buddha for a short sermon now. Just like taking the “middle way” in life is the path to nirvana, figuring out a Goldilocks zone for your body’s protein needs seems to be the key to a healthy, happy life. And doctors suggest you can meet your protein needs with whole foods like eggs, meat, and dairy products. Excuse me for now, I have a scoop of ice cream that’s calling my name.

Level up

Delulu: Short for delusional, it is the kids’ way to describe someone whose optimism veers into the realm of delusion. However, this is not looked down upon by the vast majority as people now quip, “delulu is the solulu”. This is how it will sound in a sentence: She thinks she is going to get noticed by her favourite band at their concert. Delulu is the solulu, I guess.

Are you wondering about what’s happening on Instagram, X (formerly Twitter), Reddit and Discord? Pop It Like It’s Hot, a fortnightly column from The Hindu, catches you up on everything pop culture. All you need to do, is tune in.
