Apple, Samsung May Expand Production Here As China, Vietnam Face Higher Tariffs

Pankaj.Doval@timesofindia.com

New Delhi: US President Donald Trump's tariff announcements may end up giving India a larger share in global smartphone production from Apple and Samsung, though a more clearer picture will emerge once US concludes its negotiations with various countries to fix final rates.

American electronics makers venture into low-duty locations to keep their costs and prices low to protect consumption.

Apple, which nearly dominates India's smartphone shipments of roughly $9 billion to the US, will find expansion in India more attractive, considering tariff on New Delhi stands at 27%, compared to peak duty of 54% on China. Apple primarily makes iPhones in India and China.

Through Foxconn and Tata group, Apple has been expanding in India as part of the 'China+1 strategy' and India also enjoys an advantage in starting negotiations for a bilateral trade agreement (BTA) with the US. to manage to get lower tariffs from the US during BTA talks, especially when it comes to exports of value-added products, such as smartphones, as govt positions itself as a 'trusted manufacturing ally' for the US.

"Also, support from corporations, such as Apple, Microsoft and Google, may be sought as they may be roped in as key partners to reinforce India's pitch during BTA negotiations with Trump administration," a key industry official told TOI.

Electronics industry fears that if tariffs on India continue to remain at 27% for smartphones and other allied products then there is a "chance that companies start setting up new manufacturing units" in countries with lower tariffs.

"The shift to low tariff countries may happen to arrest impact of high manufacturing costs, which threaten to fuel inflation and thus reduce consumption in US," the official said. Key industry associations of electronics are alerting govt on need to maintain guard on emergence of competing manufacturing locations beyond China and Vietnam. "Several developing countries have secured lower tariff rates compared to India, including Brazil, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, UAE (each at 10%), and the Philippines (17%). Saudi Arabia and UAE represent near-term threats to India's electronics exports due to SEZs, competitive manufacturing environments and potential labour-cost advantages," Indian Cellular & Electronics Association said.

"Brazil's favourable tariff treatment, despite historical trade barriers, adds to strategic ambiguity and warrants careful monitoring." When it comes to Samsung, the company has been hit hard after the US slapped a 46% tariff on Vietnam, which is the Korean electronics major's biggest manufacturing base. (Samsung's exports from Vietnam to the US and other key regions are estimated at around $55 billion)

This, industry analysts say, may make it "more profitable and easier" for Samsung to scale up its smartphone manufacturing base in India. Samsung officials are understood to be in a huddle at the moment, weighing options.

India's rollback on import duties expected to continue

ANUSHREE PRATAP
BENGALURU, DHNS

With US President Donald Trump harping on India's high tariff on imports in the run-up to his reciprocal tariff, the Indian government responded offering the olive branch on cutting import duties on certain US products from Harley Davidson motorcycles to bourbon whiskey in the hope of averting a major blow to its exports to the American market. Yet, the Indian government is clearly walking a tightrope between wooing the Trump administration and protecting the country's interest.

Trade negotiations from the US's perspective have focused on enhanced market access in India. Corporate giants such as Apple and Motorola have also been banking on their growth stories in India, for which they would require ease of access.

Other items under scrutiny include certain dairy products and medical devices, where the US seeks improved market access, noted Mukul Goyal, co-founder of Stratifix Consulting.

Over the past few weeks, India has reduced tariffs on about 8,500 industrial items, cutting duties on key US commodities. Of these, luxury motorcycles and bourbon whiskey were particularly referred to by Trump during his tirade on India's high tariff regime.

Motorcycles saw basic customs duty on completely built-up (CBU) units reduced from 50% to 30% for those with energy capacities above 1,600 cc and 50% to 40% for engine capacities up to 1,600 cc, in the recent Union Budget. Liquor import duties were lowered from 150% to 100% in February this year.

There have also been efforts to support Indian manufacturers brace against the impact of the reciprocal tariffs. Last month, the government removed import duties on several goods used to manufacture EV batteries and mobile phones.

"However, luxury goods remain largely untouched due to domestic sensitivities and protectionist policies aimed at safeguarding local producers," Goyal added.

For the same reasons, India has been cautious about lowering import duties on agricultural products, with the last such exercise being in 2023 when the tariff on pecans was brought down from 100% to 30%. But now, with the Damocles sword hanging over it, the Indian government is reportedly toying with the idea of cutting tariff even on farm products, besides other sectors.

India has also offered to buy more American oil, LNG and defence equipment in an effort to bridge its bilateral trade gap.

Going forward, there is an intent to negotiate a comprehensive trade deal by the end of 2025, said Vikram Kasat, Head - Advisory, PL Capital, with a tariff swap being the likely outcome. India is likely to seek removal of US tariffs, restoration of GSP (Generalised System of Preferences) benefits, and better market access.

"Arising from negotiations, the US may roll back its new 27% tariffs in return for India cutting duties on autos, especially EVs, along with agri-products like almonds and apples, and alcohol. An early harvest deal may focus on sectors like defence, where large Indian procurements could serve as a goodwill gesture to unveil and unlock progress on the trade returns," he added.

It'll be Advantage India in Long Run for Electronics

Smart supply chains to be game changer

Team ET

Mumbai | New Delhi: An un-gainly US inflation spike spawned by tariffs could temporarily dent Indian electronics exports, industry executives said, but smart supply chains that can outflank harder-hit China and other East Asian rivals should offer New Delhi long-term competitive edge in the zero-sum game of commercial diplomacy.

"The next 6-8 weeks will be crucial, and India has been negotiating hard. But now it remains to be seen if India can outpace China and Vietnam and get a favoured deal with the US," a senior industry executive said. "It can hugely benefit New Delhi from the electronics manufacturing supply chain perspective."

The India Electronics and Semiconductor Association said temporary setbacks aside, the country would remain competitive as China, Vietnam, Taiwan and Thailand

US slapped 27% tariffs on India, compared with China's 54%, Vietnam's 46%, Thailand's 36% & Taiwan's 32%

face even higher tariffs. "India's low electronic imports from the US provide room for tariff adjustments to maintain the trade balance," said Ashok Chandak, president of IESA.

AC manufacturer Blue Star, which makes appliances for two US clients in India, said a lot will depend on US demand. "We can feel happy that the tariff on India is lower than China, but US demand is a question since no company can absorb such a steep increase in tariffs. The US is a replacement market and consumers there can easily postpone purchases if prices go up a lot," said its MD B Thiagarajan.

land's 36% and Taiwan's 32%. The executive order on tariffs said the ad valorem rates of duty shall apply only to the non-US content of a subject article, provided at least 20% of the value of the subject article is US originating.

It also said 'US content' refers to the value of an article attributable to the components produced entirely or substantially transformed in the US.

Industry executives said local value addition in the US for components would typically mean hardware, though the industry is awaiting clarity on it. If it also includes software, it could protect—to an extent—the interest of US companies like Apple who are dependent on China and India for manufacturing, an industry executive said.

"We are still getting clarity on this... Even in the best case, the duty will get offset only to the extent of local value addition. But the full 27% will be levied on the balance," said a top executive of an MNC.

To be sure, some of the companies such as Samsung, Lenovo-owned Motorola and Havells, which already export to the US, might ship more from India.

Pankaj.Doval@timesofindia.com

New Delhi: US President Donald Trump's tariff announcements may end up giving India a larger share in global smartphone production from Apple and Samsung, though a more clearer picture will emerge once US concludes its negotiations with various countries to fix final rates.

There is still a chance that countries like Saudi Arabia, UAE and Brazil, which are in 10% tariff bracket — may emerge as 'new competing manufacturing destinations' as

► Pharma cos escape bitter pill, for now, P 24

American electronics makers venture into low-duty locations to keep their costs and prices low to protect consumption.

Apple, which nearly dominates India's smartphone shipments of roughly $9 billion to the US, will find expansion in India more attractive, considering tariff on New Delhi stands at 27%, compared to peak duty of 54% on China. Apple primarily makes iPhones in India and China.

Through Foxconn and Tata group, Apple has been expanding in India as part of the 'China+1 strategy' and India also enjoys an advantage in starting negotiations for a bilateral trade agreement (BTA) with the US. The Indian negotiators and the electronics industry is hoping that New Delhi will be able to manage to get lower tariffs from the US during BTA talks, especially when it comes to exports of value-added products, such as smartphones, as govt positions itself as a 'trusted manufacturing ally' for the US.

"Also, support from corporations, such as Apple, Microsoft and Google, may be sought as they may be roped in as key partners to reinforce India's pitch during BTA negotiations with Trump administration," a key industry official told TOI.

Electronics industry fears that if tariffs on India continue to remain at 27% for smartphones and other allied products then there is a "chance that companies start setting up new manufacturing units" in countries with lower tariffs.

"The shift to low tariff countries may happen to arrest impact of high manufacturing costs, which threaten to fuel inflation and thus reduce consumption in US," the official said. Key industry associations of electronics are alerting govt on need to maintain guard on emergence of competing manufacturing locations beyond China and Vietnam. "Several developing countries have secured lower tariff rates compared to India, including Brazil, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, UAE (each at 10%), and the Philippines (17%). Saudi Arabia and UAE represent near-term threats to India's electronics exports due to SEZs, competitive manufacturing environments and potential labour-cost advantages," Indian Cellular & Electronics Association said.

"Brazil's favourable tariff treatment, despite historical trade barriers, adds to strategic ambiguity and warrants careful monitoring." When it comes to Samsung, the company has been hit hard after the US slapped a 46% tariff on Vietnam, which is the Korean electronics major's biggest manufacturing base. (Samsung's exports from Vietnam to the US and other key regions are estimated at around $55 billion)

This, industry analysts say, may make it "more profitable and easier" for Samsung to scale up its smartphone manufacturing base in India. Samsung officials are understood to be in a huddle at the moment, weighing options.

Smart supply chains to be game changer

Mumbai | New Delhi: An ungainly US inflation spike spawned by tariffs could temporarily dent Indian electronics exports, industry executives said, but smart supply chains that can outflank harder-hit China and other East Asian rivals should offer New Delhi long-term competitive edge in the zero-sum game of commercial diplomacy.

"The next 6-8 weeks will be crucial, and India has been negotiating hard. But now it remains to be seen if India can outpace China and Vietnam and get a favoured deal with the US," a senior industry executive said. "It can hugely benefit New Delhi from the electronics manufacturing supply chain perspective."

The India Electronics and Semiconductor Association said temporary setbacks aside, the country would remain competitive as China, Vietnam, Taiwan and Thailand face even higher tariffs. "India's low electronic imports from the US provide room for tariff adjustments to maintain the trade balance," said Ashok Chandak, president of IESA.

AC manufacturer Blue Star, which makes appliances for two US clients in India, said a lot will depend on US demand. "We can feel happy that the tariff on India is lower than China, but US demand is a question since no company can absorb such a steep increase in tariffs. The US is a replacement market and consumers there can easily postpone purchases if prices go up a lot," said its MD B Thiagarajan.

land's 36% and Taiwan's 32%. The executive order on tariffs said the ad valorem rates of duty shall apply only to the non-US content of a subject article, provided at least 20% of the value of the subject article is US originating.

It also said 'US content' refers to the value of an article attributable to the components produced entirely or substantially transformed in the US.

Industry executives said local value addition in the US for components would typically mean hardware, though the industry is awaiting clarity on it. If it also includes software, it could protect—to an extent—the interest of US companies like Apple who are dependent on China and India for manufacturing, an industry executive said.

"We are still getting clarity on this... Even in the best case, the duty will get offset only to the extent of local value addition. But the full 27% will be levied on the balance," said a top executive of an MNC.

To be sure, some of the companies such as Samsung, Lenovo-owned Motorola and Havells, which already export to the US, might ship more from India.

Vivo T4 5G

Vivo is preparing to launch the Vivo T4 5G as the successor to the Vivo T3 5G. Expected to launch in April 2025, it will feature a 6.67-inch full-HD+ AMOLED quad-curved display with a 120Hz refresh rate. The phone is likely to be powered by the Qualcomm Snapdragon 7s Gen 3 chipset and run on Android 15-based Funtouch OS 15, offering a seamless user experience.

Motorola Edge 60 Fusion

Motorola is bringing the Moto Edge 60 Fusion to India on April 2, 2025. The smartphone will feature a 1.5K all-curved AMOLED display, providing an immersive viewing experience. It will be powered by the MediaTek Dimensity 7400 chipset for efficient performance. The camera setup includes a 50MP Sony LYT 700 primary sensor, a 13MP secondary lens, and a 32MP front camera for high-quality selfies.

Poco C71

Poco is set to introduce the Poco C71, a budget-friendly smartphone with a sleek and modern design. It will feature a 6.88-inch HD+ display with a 120Hz refresh rate, ensuring smooth performance. The phone also boasts a premium split-grid design. The Poco C71 is scheduled to launch in India on April 4, 2025, at 12:00 PM.

Poco F7 Ultra

Poco has launched the F7 Ultra in global markets, and it is expected to debut in India in April 2025. The phone will feature a 6.67-inch 2K 12-bit AMOLED display with a 120Hz refresh rate and an impressive 3200 nits peak brightness. The global variant runs on the latest Snapdragon 8 Elite processor, which is likely to be included in the Indian version as well. Additionally, the device will have an IP68 rating for water and dust resistance and a 50MP primary camera for high-quality photography.

With so many exciting launches lined up, April 2025 is set to be a fantastic month for smartphone buyers. Whether you're looking for a budget-friendly device or a high-end flagship, there are plenty of options to choose from. Stay tuned for these upcoming releases!

BIGGER BLOW FOR CHINA, OTHER EAST ASIAN NATIONS

It'll be Advantage India in Long Run for Electronics

Smart supply chains to be game changer

Team ET

Mumbai | New Delhi: An ungainly US inflation spike spawned by tariffs could temporarily dent Indian electronics exports, industry executives said, but smart supply chains that can outflank harder-hit China and other East Asian rivals should offer New Delhi long-term competitive edge in the zero-sum game of commercial diplomacy.

"The next 6-8 weeks will be crucial, and India has been negotiating hard. But now it remains to be seen if India can outpace China and Vietnam and get a favoured deal with the US," a senior industry executive said. "It can hugely benefit New Delhi from the electronics manufacturing supply chain perspective."

The India Electronics and Semiconductor Association said temporary setbacks aside, the country would remain competitive as China, Vietnam, Taiwan and Thailand face even higher tariffs. "India's low electronic imports from the US provide room for tariff adjustments to maintain the trade balance," said Ashok Chandak, president of IESA.

AC manufacturer Blue Star, which makes appliances for two US clients in India, said a lot will depend on US demand. "We can feel happy that the tariff on India is lower than China, but US demand is a question since no company can absorb such a steep increase in tariffs. The US is a replacement market and consumers there can easily postpone purchases if prices go up a lot," said its MD B Thiagarajan.

WHEN LESS IS MORE

The US slapped 27% tariffs on imports from India, compared with China's 54%, Vietnam's 46%, Thai-

China's cumulative tariffs, including previous tariff actions, range from 54% to 154% and Vietnam faces 46%, finds ICEA

India much better placed with 27% tariffs

But countries like Brazil, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, UAE (each at 10%) and Philippines (17%) have advantage over India

India along with Japan, S Korea & Indonesia could potentially negotiate deals for lower tariffs later: Morgan Stanley

land's 36% and Taiwan's 32%. The executive order on tariffs said the ad valorem rates of duty shall apply only to the non-US content of a subject article, provided at least 20% of the value of the subject article is US originating.

It also said 'US content' refers to the value of an article attributable to the components produced entirely or substantially transformed in the US.

Industry executives said local value addition in the US for components would typically mean hardware, though the industry is awaiting clarity on it. If it also includes software, it could protect—to an extent—the interest of US companies like Apple who are dependent on China and India for manufacturing, an industry executive said.

"We are still getting clarity on this... Even in the best case, the duty will get offset only to the extent of local value addition. But the full 27% will be levied on the balance," said a top executive of an MNC.

To be sure, some of the companies such as Samsung, Lenovo-owned Motorola and Havells, which already export to the US, might ship more from India.

Pankaj.Doyal@timesofindia.com

New Delhi: US President Donald Trump's tariff announcements may end up giving India a larger share in global smartphone production from Apple and Samsung, though a more clearer picture will emerge once US concludes its negotiations with various countries to fix final rates.

There is still a chance that countries like Saudi Arabia, UAE and Brazil, which are in 10% tariff bracket — may emerge as 'new competing manufacturing destinations' as

American electronics makers venture into low-duty locations to keep their costs and prices low to protect consumption.

Apple, which nearly dominates India's smartphone shipments of roughly $9 billion to the US, will find expansion in India more attractive, considering tariff on New Delhi stands at 27%, compared to peak duty of 54% on China. Apple primarily makes iPhones in India and China.

Through Foxconn and Tata group, Apple has been expanding in India as part of the 'China+1 strategy' and India also enjoys an advantage in starting negotiations for a bilateral trade agreement (BTA) with the US. The Indian negotiators and the electronics industry is hoping that New Delhi will be able to manage to get lower tariffs from the US during BTA talks, especially when it comes to exports of value-added products, such as smartphones, as govt positions itself as a 'trusted manufacturing ally' for the US.

"Also, support from corporations, such as Apple, Microsoft and Google, may be sought as they may be roped in as key partners to reinforce India's pitch during BTA negotiations with Trump administration," a key industry official told TOI.

Electronics industry fears that if tariffs on India continue to remain at 27% for smartphones and other allied products then there is a "chance that companies start setting up new manufacturing units" in countries with lower tariffs.

"The shift to low tariff countries may happen to arrest impact of high manufacturing costs, which threaten to fuel inflation and thus reduce consumption in US," the official said. Key industry associations of electronics are alerting govt on need to maintain guard on emergence of competing manufacturing locations beyond China and Vietnam. "Several developing countries have secured lower tariff rates compared to India, including Brazil, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, UAE (each at 10%), and the Philippines (17%). Saudi Arabia and UAE represent near-term threats to India's electronics exports due to SEZs, competitive manufacturing environments and potential labour-cost advantages," Indian Cellular & Electronics Association said.

"Brazil's favourable tariff treatment, despite historical trade barriers, adds to strategic ambiguity and warrants careful monitoring." When it comes to Samsung, the company has been hit hard after the US slapped a 46% tariff on Vietnam, which is the Korean electronics major's biggest manufacturing base. (Samsung's exports from Vietnam to the US and other key regions are estimated at around $55 billion)

This, industry analysts say, may make it "more profitable and easier" for Samsung to scale up its smartphone manufacturing base in India. Samsung officials are understood to be in a huddle at the moment, weighing options.

BIGGER BLOW FOR CHINA, OTHER EAST ASIAN NATIONS

It'll be Advantage India in Long Run for Electronics

Smart supply chains to be game changer

Team ET

Mumbai | New Delhi: An ungainly US inflation spike spawned by tariffs could temporarily dent Indian electronics exports, industry executives said, but smart supply chains that can outflank harder-hit China and other East Asian rivals should offer New Delhi long-term competitive edge in the zero-sum game of commercial diplomacy.

"The next 6-8 weeks will be crucial, and India has been negotiating hard. But now it remains to be seen if India can outpace China and Vietnam and get a favoured deal with the US," a senior industry executive said. "It can hugely benefit New Delhi from the electronics manufacturing supply chain perspective."

The India Electronics and Semiconductor Association said temporary setbacks aside, the country would remain competitive as China, Vietnam, Taiwan and Thailand face even higher tariffs. "India's low electronic imports from the US provide room for tariff adjustments to maintain the trade balance," said Ashok Chandak, president of IESA.

AC manufacturer Blue Star, which makes appliances for two US clients in India, said a lot will depend on US demand. "We can feel happy that the tariff on India is lower than China, but US demand is a question since no company can absorb such a steep increase in tariffs. The US is a replacement market and consumers there can easily postpone purchases if prices go up a lot," said its MD B Thiagarajan.

WHEN LESS IS MORE

The US slapped 27% tariffs on imports from India, compared with China's 54%, Vietnam's 46%, Thai-

China's cumulative tariffs, including previous tariff actions, range from 54% to 154% and Vietnam faces 46%, finds ICEA

India much better placed with 27% tariffs

But countries like Brazil, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, UAE (each at 10%) and Philippines (17%) have advantage over India

India along with Japan, S Korea & Indonesia could potentially negotiate deals for lower tariffs later: Morgan Stanley

land's 36% and Taiwan's 32%. The executive order on tariffs said the ad valorem rates of duty shall apply only to the non-US content of a subject article, provided at least 20% of the value of the subject article is US originating.

It also said 'US content' refers to the value of an article attributable to the components produced entirely or substantially transformed in the US.

Industry executives said local value addition in the US for components would typically mean hardware, though the industry is awaiting clarity on it. If it also includes software, it could protect—to an extent—the interest of US companies like Apple who are dependent on China and India for manufacturing, an industry executive said.

"We are still getting clarity on this... Even in the best case, the duty will get offset only to the extent of local value addition. But the full 27% will be levied on the balance," said a top executive of an MNC.

To be sure, some of the companies such as Samsung, Lenovo-owned Motorola and Havells, which already export to the US, might ship more from India.
